

ODDLY CASUAL

Oddly Casual - a quirky band hailing from the Garden State - brings a fresh eclectic sound to the music scene in the genre of rock meets alternative.

The roots of the band lie in a friendship forged by four grade school friends - Joey Regan (Lead Vocals), Sol Mohamed (Bass) and Aaron Triolo (Drums). Their journey began in their middle school years, realizing their common interest in music.

Joey and Sol first began writing music and lyrics together, and eventually they decided to take their work to the streets. With humble beginnings in a small town in New Jersey, Joey and Sol would play together on the main street of Flemington - for nothing more than for their love of music...and of course some pocket change. During high school they practiced and played together recreationally throughout their four years, but then life drifted them apart.

It wasn't until the pandemic when life took a pause that they realized it was time to get back together and to pursue music as their career. It was then that Aaron joined the group as their drummer.

Influenced heavily by the burgeoning rock and alternative music scene of their time (Green Day, Red Hot Chili Peppers, The Avett Brothers) the group strives to reach the heights of their icons, and make their New Jersey hometown proud.

For them it's all about the music...their name is exactly who they are...just a group of odd and casual friends playing their hearts out together - delivering to their audience a heightened sound and lyrical journey.